Game Set Up

Determine before the game how you'd like to play. You can print one copy of the game and designate one person, the Game Master, to ask all questions, or Single Player, and give each player a copy and a pen and let them determine their answers before everyone answers.

Download and print a copy or copies for game play. If playing via Zoom or other social media platform, that player or players may also need a copy or copies.

Note on Printing:

You'll notice I've included 2 copies of the printable. You can choose to print as normal, and one game will print per sheet. BUT, if you're like me, and printing these games last minute, you may be running low on printer paper, you can print 2 pages per sheet. Although printers are different, most have this feature available. On mine, when I click to print, there is an option for how many pages per sheet. Keep the page in portrait, and change to 2 pages per sheet. Because I've included 2 of the same page, it will print 2-1/2 size sheets on one page; still leaving plenty of room to write.

Game Play

Game Master: In this version of the game, the Game Master reads from the list of questions and randomly asks players a question to answer - and possibly why they chose that answer. The same question can be asked more than once - inviting more conversation on what and why!

Single Player: each player circles the answer of their choice before the conversation begins.

Winning the Game

Since there are no wrong answers, everyone's a winner!
